I'm sorry to submit this so late but I only just thought of these two items after our recent visit to our son. First, at Shelton in the visitation room where families have photos taken they have attractive background photo panels that the inmates and loved ones can stand in front of for their photo. The backdrops can be changed easily with the season or occasion similar to those used at family photography studios. Would something like that be possible at Larch? Second is regarding the vending machines. Could the vending machines provide more variety when they are filled. They used to offer more variety than now. Of late the vendor will fill 30-40 slots with the exact same item. The Family Council has invited the vendor to attend one of our meetings but they have declined. Also there is no way to communicate with the vendor when the machines have malfunctioned. For example on one of our recent visits I purchased two of the Starburst Strawberry Sorbet bars. Both obviously had melted and been refroze inside the wrapper with the stick buried somewhere inside the flattened sorbet contents. There should be an avenue of recourse to receive a credit or refund for instances such as this. Thank you and we look forward to seeing everyone at the next meeting.
